

Vicious Cycle of Poor Grazing

Poor grazing systems lead to detrimental, or vicious cycles, which damage plants and soil.

Plants that are grazed too frequently and too short for too many years may adapt by staying really short. Even when animals are removed, it may take months or even a couple of years to recover.

The soil and plants become unable to deal with adverse weather events such as drought and floods, through issues such as reduced water infiltration and less root growth.

All images and text © Pen Rashbass. Licensed for use under Creative Commons License CC BY-SA 4.0
Funding for resources provided through SE & North Pasture & Profit Programmes

